EVALUATION OF CONTENT

1. For more than 25 years Ganjurwa Hutukhtu, who is now 33 years of age, lived in Dolonnor (Tolon, 116-25, 42-10) near the Hsi-hui-tse Sume (monastery). In 1945, however, when detachments of USSR troops approached Dolonnor and killed hundreds of the more important Mongol lamas, Ganjurwa Hutukhtu escaped to Peiping where local Chinese authorities gave him living quarters in the southeast section of the city.

[redacted] Lama now in Kansu Province. Also see the China Handbook for 1944, page 21 stating that Changchia Hutukhtu, with headquarters in Peiping is the most important of the Living Buddhas. ]

2. During the month of October, 3,000 Mongolian People's Republic troops occupied the northern section of the Silingol Aimak in Chahar Province. The 8 Route Army troops retreated to Peitzumiao (116-10, 43-50). At this time, the inhabitants of Inner Mongolia living along the banks of the Silin (Silingol) [?Hsialiao?] River mobilized all Mongol men between the ages of 18 and 45. Arms and ammunition were supplied by the Mongolian People's Republic and now these recently organized troops are fighting against detachments of the 8 Route Army.

3. The Barun Sunit Hoshun, a banner of the Silingol Aimak is occupied by Mongolian People's Republic troops. The following propaganda is being directed by these troops toward the Chinese living in that area: "You, 'stranger people', should not interfere with the affairs of the Mongolian people. We delivered Inner Mongolia from the Japanese more than a year ago and then gave the country to you; but you have had a civil war which has exhausted the resources of the people. Education is at a standstill, there is an acute scarcity of necessary commodities, etc., and for these reasons we must take Inner Mongolia under our protection."
